

Week 17 – Summer CSA

September 26 – October 2, 2022

Hi friends,

It's starting to get moist on the ground outside in the mornings, as our cool late September nights prompt the water to fall out of the air. It's a long awaited transition toward fall, with the temperatures getting more soothing to the soul and body, and yet not necessarily less busy on the farm. Harvests will be moving into mostly cool season produce ahead, with some exceptions still (based on our high tunnel production), and high on our list of crops we love are our Hakurei turnips. This particular patch has come out very juicy, sweet, and tender – not just a simple crunch like most radishes, or even like many batches of turnips can turn out. Hakurei turnips are wonderful in that, while they can be cooked of course, they really shine as a fresh eating vegetable. Either slice them or just eat them out of hand. Kids' lunches and parents' work snacks all benefit. It is a common fall and spring sight here to see one of us farmers having a bite out of a fresh Hakurei turnip, and feeling satisfied by its sweet cooling effects. Have a great week, enjoy your box!
